Correct Identification Eases Gate Congestion

By carrying proper identification military personnel, community members and local nationals can ease the strain on military police and force protection teams at installation gates. The increased force protection level has caused some confusion about what forms of identification are acceptable to enter U.S. installations. The primary form of ID is the military identification card. Acceptable secondary forms are a U.S. Army Europe driver's license, stateside ID or driver's license or U.S. passport. A European Command security badge will also be accepted as a valid second form of ID with a military ID card. Children and teenagers are required to only have their military ID card with them.

Local national's installation pass number should correspond with the number listed on their Ausweis, the German national ID card. As of Oct. 15, installation passes with incorrect numbers are being confiscated at the gate. Local nationals with incorrect identification will have to be signed in at the front gate and sent to the Pass and ID Office to obtain a new pass with numbers correctly corresponding to their Ausweis.
